Sustainable Lands Project

Snowy Monaro Regional Council in partnership with Upper Snowy Landcare is excited to introduce the Sustainable Lands Project. This project is supported by the Department of Agriculture Water and the Environment through funding from Australian Governments National Landcare Program.

Through a series of 12 free workshops and field days, delivered over two years, the project will help landholders to better understanding and apply sustainable land management principals.

Experts on Soil Science, Holistic Farming, Traditional Land Management, Native Plants, Biosecurity, and our local Monaro Champions of Regenerative Agriculture will meet to share knowledge and experience and inspire others in the region to adopt sustainable farming methods.

By connecting farmers and landowners with industry champions, this project hopes to support a connected, resilient, community of practice. Meeting local champions on their farms will demonstrate firsthand the benefits of adopting sustainable land management behaviours and encourage everyone to 'have a go.'

Landholders are encouraged to participate in the project's Community Based Social Marketing initiative, which aims to identify and address common barriers to adopting sustainable land management methods.

Learn about Holistic farming with Peter and Narelle Davis

The first event in the Sustainable Lands series will be at Yalcowinna in Cooma, hosted by the Davis family.

Learn about holistic farming with Peter and Narelle Davis.

Peter and Narelle Davis started holistic management on their farm Yalcowinna in the late 90's, turning a degrading landscape into a sustainable grazing operation, lifting productivity and putting fun back into farming on the way.
